Mica Pollock is an associate professor at the Harvard Graduate School of Education. An anthropologist of education, she previously taught tenth grade and worked in the civil rights field. She is the author of Colormute: Race Talk Dilemmas in an American School and Because of Race: How Americans Debate Harm and Opportunity in Our Schools.

AN ESSENTIAL TOOL FOR EDUCATORS AND PARENTS DETERMINED TO MOVE BEYOND FRUSTRATIONS ABOUT RACE IN SCHOOL

"Teachers and parents often want to act on the issue of racism, but don't know how. This one-of-a-kind volume is the blueprint; no one should teach another day without reading it."
—Tim Wise, author, White Like Me

"It's rare to find a book as theoretically rich and practically useful as this one."
—Bill Bigelow, editor, Rethinking Schools magazine

"Shows how ordinary people can be mindful and purposeful in confronting discrimination and taking concrete steps that, little by little, change the world."
—Linda Darling-Hammond, Stanford University

How should teachers respond when children ask challenging questions about race? How should teachers handle the use of the "N-word" or discuss "achievement gaps" with colleagues? How can teachers avoid unwittingly making children of color speak on behalf of their entire group? In over fifty original pieces written especially for this groundbreaking book, Everyday Antiracism offers practical advice for teachers and parents.

Leading educators—among them Beverly Daniel Tatum, Sonia Nieto, and Pedro A. Noguera—describe concrete ways to analyze classroom interactions that may or may not be "racial," deal with racial inequality and "diversity," and teach to high standards across racial lines. Topics range from using racial incidents as teachable moments to valuing students' home worlds and helping parents fight ethnic and racial misconceptions about their children. Questions following each essay prompt readers to examine everyday issues of race and opportunity in their own classrooms and schools.
